China Weather Index Insurance Project (China WII)

The China Weather Index Insurance Project (China WII), supported by the British Embassy Beijing, aims to create markets of digital insurance in rural areas by engaging public-private stakeholders. The project partners with policymakers, insurance companies, financial institutions, and insurance-tech players to introduce digital technology-empowered insurances, such as Weather Index Insurance (WII) across the country over the next three years. The project also elevates its strategy from “product piloting” at inception to “creating markets” as of now. The four strategic pillars of this new strategy are climate change adaptation, tech-enabled innovations, policy advocacy, and international knowledge transfer. Read more.

Empowering Youth in Africa to Build Next Gen Agriculture Systems

As climate change is predicted to affect the agriculture sector of Africa even more in the future when more youth are predicted to be engaged in agriculture, climate risk solutions supported by GIIF will contribute to improving financial inclusion and increasing the productivity of the entire value chain.

With the development of the insurance industry in Africa, more value-added services are being offered along with the risk protection being increasingly enabled by digital platforms. The scope of these platforms ranges from disseminating agri-knowledge and bundling with productive assets to embedding insurance as part of larger agriculture risk management. Read more.

ABOUT GIIF

The Global Index Insurance Facility (GIIF) is a dedicated World Bank Group’s program that facilitates access to finance for smallholder farmers, micro-entrepreneurs, and microfinance institutions through the provisions of catastrophic risk transfer solutions and index-based insurance in developing countries.
